

Emily Decker
6th grade

The desert is a place where all the animals hunt and run away.

The desert is a place where there's everlasting heat-- what a treat for the cold-blooded creatures.

The desert is a place where the temperatures drop with just a pop.

The desert is a place where the animals have to adapt to the wild everyday just to stay.

The desert is a place where plants store water and not get water.

With a spikey outside, but sort of soft and slimy on the inside – like cacti.

The desert is a place where water is hard to find, but you've just got to use your mind.

The desert is a wonderful place,

Just take a look inside behind all the heat and prickly plants, and you'll see beyond the lands.

